

Dominican, Silver and Black-billed, dispersed widely throughout New Zealand. From the number of gulls banded in New Zealand and Australia (approximately 83,800 to the end of 1962 banding season) it appears certain that movement of gulls across the Tasman must be extremely rare. Recoveries of up to 300 miles distant were made with Caspian Terns, while 13 Giant Petrels banded as nestlings at South Georgia, South Orkneys and Macquarie Island were recovered in New Zealand.

To To sum up, this report is of great interest to Australian workers and should be read, particularly by those persons interested in sea-birds movement.
