

RECOVERY ROUND-UP

This section is prepared with the co-operation of the Secretary, Australian Bird and Bat Banding Schemes, Australian National Parks and Wildlife Service. The recoveries are only a selection of the thousands received each year; they are not a complete list and should not be analysed in full or part without prior consent of the banders concerned. Longevity and distance records refer to the ABBBS unless otherwise stated. The distance is the shortest distance in kilometres along the direct line joining the place of banding and recovery; the compass direction refers to the same direct line. (There is no implication regarding the distance flown or the route followed by the bird).

Recovery or longevity items may be submitted directly to me whereupon their merits for inclusion will be considered.

Hon. Editor.

- Movements in excess of 700 km for Sacred Kingfishers banded in Australia up to 30/6/85. (From a total number of 1 849 Sacred Kingfishers banded under the ABBBS.)

While some Sacred Kingfishers are known to overwinter in south-eastern Australia, recoveries of birds banded in the eastern region of Australia demonstrate a north/south migration along the coast of Australia to Papua New Guinea.

Recoveries of birds at or near banding places in both eastern Australia and Papua New Guinea demonstrate seasonal site fidelity in both areas.

Movements of birds banded in the central and western portion of Australia is not clear. The recovery of a single bird banded near Chain of Ponds Creek, SA and recovered at Tuart Hill, Perth, WA three seasons later suggests that the bird moved north from its natal area, but returned along a vastly different route, perhaps in company with other birds, to Western Australia. From this it can be speculated that birds from both South Australia and Western Australia may share a common wintering area, e.g., Timor.

Further banding of this species is recommended, especially in the central and western regions of Australia. Recoveries may then clarify the migration patterns of these populations.
